9. OPC SERVER SECURITY SETTINGS

9.1 Disable OPC server if it is not used

Description:

OPC server provides data to other applications. These applications can be run on the same system or other systems in the same network. This means that process data can be viewed, for example, in Microsoft Excel. If you do not need OPC server, we recommend you to disable it in the project.

How to fix:

Ensure the running OPCDAServer.exe application is absent in the list of OS processes.

Start -> Setting -> Control Panel -> WinCC flexible 2008 -> Project -> Project Name -> Device Name (WinCC flexible Runtime) -> Device Settings -> Device Settings -> Runtime services Act as OPC server
Enabling and disabling communication settings for the project is available here: WinCC Flexible 2008 -> Project -> Project Name -> Device Name (WinCC flexible Runtime) -> Communication -> Connection -> OPC.

9.2 Configure DCOM access rights

Description:

Data exchange between OPC DA server and OPC client is done via DCOM interface. You should grant DCOM start and access privileges before the data exchange process is run.

How to fix:

Grant DCOM start and access privileges before a OPC client is able to start OPC DA server and establish connection for data exchange:

Start -> Settings -> Control Panel -> Administrative tools -> Component services -> Component Services -> Console Root\Component\Services\Computers\My Computer\DCOM Configuration
Open OPC.SimaticHMI.HmiRT context menu and choose Properties. You can see OPC.SimaticHMI.HmiRTm properties dialog window.
